

Wis. Delegation
Opens War on President

By STEPHEN BOLLES
Convention Hall, Cleveland.—Open revolt against Coolidge was the spirit that dominated the caucus of the Wisconsin delegation last night.

Coolidge was not considered. That LaFollette was to be a candidate was understood and the delegates present were pledging themselves to support him. Henry Allen Cooper, usually careful about expressing himself in moments like these, came all the way over.

There was a great deal said about the mandate of the people, but the caucus was prepared in advance at preliminary caucuses Sunday night and all day Monday. Jack said, "Tom Scott was not present. He had no voice in any of the preliminaries and, as he said, had no interest in the caucus. Some things happened. There was a change in the lineup preliminary to the state organization of the republican party holding the Coolidge ticket.

The whole slate was made and ready long before the caucus was called to order by the national committee. After being in that position since 1908, Mr. Rogers was not renominated. It was said, Senator LaFollette did not want his law partner serving as national committee man for the Republicans while he was an independent candidate. So a Milwaukee lawyer, Jim Lorenz, was named.

The spirit of revolt was in the air. That the delegation was ready to bolt was certain. How the members of congress and state candidates, running off the republican ticket, would attempt to square the circle when the national holding candidate for president was not explained.

They do not need to explain in Wisconsin, since all the machinery is in the hands of the bolters. Congressman Cooper definitely aligned himself with the bolters and is a candidate for congress on the republican ticket. It is there has ever been a better deal, as far as the public is concerned, at the caucus took him out of the doubtful class forever. He will follow LaFollette wherever he leads, as he said.

North Dakota, with six of its 13 delegates for LaFollette, making a certain 34 votes for the senator, will stick with Wisconsin and refuse to make any steps not taken by Wisconsin. This was indicated also by the members of the North Dakota delegation to be permitted to enter the Wisconsin caucus and be pledged, by E. G. Larsen of Aetna, in a speech that the state of North Dakota would present its five electoral votes for LaFollette if given the opportunity.

The result of the caucus was the selection of the following slate: Senator of the state, Gov. Blaine; resolutions, Henry Allen Cooper, Racine; credentials, Clinton Price, Manitowoc; rules and order of business, George Affeldt, Milwaukee; permanent organization, Hubert J. Rock, Milwaukee; honorary vice-president, Mrs. Hattie Tegtmeyer of Milwaukee; sergeant at arms, Harry W. Johnson, Milwaukee; secretary, H. W. White, Superior; member of the committee to notify the president, Thomas Scott, Kenosha; member of committee to notify vice-president, Eben Hunt, Endeavor member of the national republican committee, Ira S. Lorenz, Milwaukee; suggested as woman member, Mrs. Julia Anderson-Schmitz, Racine.

One has to begin at the beginning of this story. It differs from all other caucuses ever held by the Wisconsin delegation since 1908. Heretofore there has never been open revolt or talk of a bolt. Last night that was all there was to it. There was no attempt to change anything. Mr. Rock, as chairman of the national slate speech, he told of the contests of the past, the convention of 1908 when the platform was presented by Henry Allen Cooper and the delegation had been blissed. Three planks in that platform and most of the others have since, said the governor, been written into law. In most of the states, there will be another giving to the people the right to vote for presidents in direct primary. The rest of the great mass of organized wealth, and we see, have answered that, so far as the future is concerned, it has been determined to give the great throbbing heart of the people who are demanding representative government an avenue by which they can express their Cleveland—William M. Butler of Massachusetts—that's all. He is the new dictator of the republican party. He is the man whose word is law with the assembled delegates. He is the man who dethroned Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. He speaks for Calvin Coolidge and though he speaks little, he wields today the power to select a vice-president and to make the platform of the party.

Mr. Butler has been convention manager. For 10 months he has been actively gathering delegates, picking them carefully and winning the regular state organizations to his side. He will be the next chairman of the republican national committee and the manager of the Coolidge campaign for election.

Some people think that the convention atmosphere is unenthusiastic and dull. Some newspaper men accuse it to more excitement say it is interesting. To be sure it isn't spectacular; there is no sign of tension, but it is on the other hand, remarkable contrast to 1920.

The resolution was in answer to the governor's letter made public yesterday, which called for a record vote on all of the propositions submitted by the executive in recent communications. Instead of going into the issues and taking a record vote, the commission referred the resolution to the minutes of its last session, declaring that "herein the record of votes taken on the various propositions is given in accordance with our regular custom."

The commission's resolution continues:

"With regard to your various requests relating to economy, the commission took such action as was consistent with the law governing its expenditures."

"Prove It or Retract."

"With regard to your accusation that the commission, or certain members thereof, are responsible for 'gross incompetency and inefficiency and official misconduct,' the commission desires to state that so far as the facts are known to it, this accusation is utterly without foundation, except that the commission is aware that your letter, while it has been fully guilty of what we deem official misconduct."

The departure of Mrs. Jackson from this city soon will be felt with keen regret in various circles, but particularly in the youthful talent which has done much during her residence here. ## HIGH COURT HOLDS

WELCH TRIAL FAIR

State Upheld in Delavan Man's Case, Unique in Wisconsin.

ELKHORN.—In sustaining the state's conviction of Mark Welch, Delavan restaurant proprietor, filed Saturday, the Wisconsin supreme court agreed on what it was the first case brought before it in which the violation of liquor laws was through sale of extracts for beverage purposes.

Welch was convicted by a jury in the Walworth county court in February on a charge he should have known it was to be used for beverage purposes, and was fined $1,000 by Judge Alden Jenkins.

He appealed on the grounds the scales warrant was illegal, charging that C. W. May, the complaining witness, signed himself as clerk of the city controller instead of city clerk, and the scales could not be made no different. Other usual grounds were overruled by the high court.

The decision is a victory for District Attorney Alfred Godfrey who has conducted the state's case.

ELKHORN.—Leonard Nease, who has been visiting relatives here for the past few months, has spent considerable of his time at the E. H. Burtin garage. Here he has built a side lantern, together with 600 slides illustrating every subject taught in high school, and lecture books to accompany them. Books to the value of $75 and a small fund for the use of the public speaking department were also left. The gifts were accepted by John Matheson, representing the new senior class.

Hard work is the way to all honor, according to Prof. Gilman, who gave the address of the evening. A difficult thing ought to be sought and not avoided, he said, since applause and honor come to those who conquer difficult situations.

Don't Sidestep Difficulties.

"Most of us sidestep difficulties," prof. Gilman declared. "It is easy to let somebody else do your thinking for you, but it is a hard proposition to do your own."

"It seems to me that we have got into a horrible state of mind," he said in speaking with special reference to university students, whom he quoted as saying, "The stuff's too hard. The lessons are too long."

"They don't seem to realize that the thing that makes the world go round is their ability to think for themselves," he said. "The commission recently appointed by the circuit court to establish the value of certain lands through which route 20 is to go, made its report to those interested. It is understood to be an advance over the appraisal made by the county commissioners."

The National Convention.

This is the 15th national republican convention day. In session in Cleveland on Lake Erie are some 1,100 men and women who are going through the regular emotion and motion of naming a president. Few, if any, conventions like it have been held heretofore. Its nearest counterpart was the convention at Chicago in 1904 when Roosevelt was nominated with no opposition and Fairbanks of Indiana received the nomination for vice-president. Four times before that vice presidents had been in office as president and four times failed to be nominated after serving out parts of a presidential term. Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson and Arthur were given only the slightest, if any attention as candidates for the presidency.

Roosevelt, who broke about all other precedents in presidential life, also broke this one, and for the first time in the history of the nation we had a presidential candidate who had been first nominated and elected vice-president. President Coolidge will be the second.

There is no outstanding excitement at the republican convention today. It differs from others in that there are no acrimonious and party dividing contests. It is peculiar in that it has expressed itself in advance as having faith in its candidate.

If any men in the United States have ever achieved what has come to Calvin Coolidge in the man and willingness to trust him in spite of differing opinions on some subjects, and the fact that the republican party machine found in him a man it could not dominate or swerve in any manner for the purpose of political expedience.

A convention brings together for any political party, the best there is in that party. It is a great gathering in Cleveland of the men who have much to say in government. There has been a loss in state and community since we have done away with this type of town meeting made bigger and broader. There is something about a convention which cannot be said of a primary alone. In the association of men and women in a desire to do the very best for the government and not stimulated by personal reasons and selfish ambitions as when men run in a primary and there are no conventions.

The greatest achievements in this nation have come from organized party successes and where parties have been held responsible for actions. We have added to our troubles by making the responsibility one of persons. Men die, pass out of the horizon, but the party and organization goes on carrying out the plans and purposes of which the individual is but a fraction and an agent. Monarchs place all faith and responsibility in individuals. The "good reign" and the "bad reign" of this king and that was marked in history. We give the individual here every opportunity, but after all, the great group he represents in official life must bear the ultimate responsibility.

It is because of this fact that the national convention, expressing the voice of a great mass of the people, assumes immense importance.

Mayor Hylan, of New York, made an address at the Rochester, N. Y., Conference of Mayors of the state of New York, and he spent most of his time denouncing the state policies of Gov. Al Smith. He did not mention the governor, only attacked those laws and measures which were known specifically as the governor's. It would seem therefore that all is not entirely in harmony in the bailiwick of New York.

Another Nation Knocked Into a Cocked Hat.

Every time one gets all set up with ideas someone comes along to tear away the veil and show that the former basis for a conclusion is no evanescent as public office.

We have all made up our minds to the fact that there has been much drinking of hard liquor by members of congress and that this condition was entirely due to the Volstead law which prohibited liquor selling, and by inference, the purchase and consumption of whiskey or alcohol in any form for beverage purposes. It was entirely outside the argument that we have had some hard drinkers in congress heretofore and that a statesman well-pledged and pledged was not an unknown quantity since the very time congress sat in New York back in 1789. All the present drinking industry was entirely attributable now to the 18th amendment and Mr. Volstead. Indeed, one of the scandals of the reconstruction period was a president of the United States who was frequently lit up and had appeared at the inauguration of President Lincoln so drunk as to be noticeable and cause serious talk of permitting him to resign as vice-president. Nothing like that has occurred since.

But painful news comes from across the pond. Charges are made that members of the British parliament have been drinking too much and that the bar of the House of Commons is kept open far too late—after all the city bars are closed, giving the members a mean adventure over other laboring people. Scenes in the Commons and noisy disturbances are charged to this open bar. We cannot understand how it could possibly be. Now let us see: there is no Volstead law there and no incentive to go out and

IRELAND'S ECONOMIC PROGRESS

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington.—Most of the news which the American people have had from Ireland in the past few years has concerned political controversy, guerrilla warfare between the factions, bomb outrages, assassinations, and other violent happenings. The Irish Free State, nevertheless, has not devoted all of its efforts to strife. Some constructive work has been going on in trade and production have found place between riots. The department of commerce always maintains a discreet silence concerning the political affairs of a foreign nation, but takes keen interest in its industrial and commercial life. In the reports which come to that department from Old Ireland may be found nothing relating to the fighting but much which shows that the Irish Free State is making progress toward an independent economic status.

The latest reports show that there is less labor unrest in the Emerald Isle than there has been in the last two years, and this despite the fact that large numbers of soldiers have been demobilized. Demobilization of soldiers caused labor unrest in practically every country in Europe after the war. It is a usual phenomenon following a war—especially in an old country where work is relatively scarce in proportion to population. After serving under arms for several years and being encased in destruction, it is difficult for the soldier to lay down his arms and turn to productive pursuits. He chafes against the restraints of civil life, finding them in a sense more confining than military discipline.

It will be remembered that immediately after the armistice there was such widespread unemployment in the United States that President Harding found it necessary to call a national conference on the subject.

This had not been the case after the American Civil War because the country was newer then. Take care of the unemployed soldiers, congress gave them bonuses in the form of land grants. The change from fighting armies to the fighting of Indians and nature on the frontier was not so much a change as the transition from military ranks to little farms in highly cultivated districts or to factories and desks.

Ireland has no new land to grant to discharged soldiers and Irish soldiers have the reputation of entertaining a hereditary preference for contest rather than for more peaceful pursuits. Nevertheless, the Irish soldiers who now are being discharged in large numbers in relation to the population are quietly finding employment and helping to build up their new nation.

The number of registered unemployed at the first of the year in the Irish Free State is reported as 32,545 of whom 26,624 were men. On March 1 only 29,649 unemployed were registered of whom 23,552 were men.

The Irishman is essentially an independent type of man who doesn't relish registering anywhere, it is known that most of the unemployed have not sent in their names to the government. It is estimated that not more than 80,000 are out of work in the whole Free State. Most of these are agricultural laborers.

A general improvement in Irish Free State economic conditions is expected throughout the year. The livestock industry is one of the most important in Ireland and it is on the increase. Last fall there was a widespread shipping strike which paralyzed trade of all kinds but since its settlement business has picked up rapidly.

The position of the Irish farmer is better than it has been for some time. During the first quarter of 1924 the exports of the Irish Free State to Great Britain amounted to 12,222,713 head of cattle, an increase of 4,000 head over the number shipped in the first quarter of 1923. The recovery of this important industry has increased the purchasing power of the Irish farmer and this, in turn, has given a general briskness to trade all through the commonwealth, as the farmer is in a position to buy the things he needs.

General trade of the Irish Free State started off briskly this year. January showed an unfavorable trade balance in the sense that more goods were imported than exported, but this indicates a strong Irish purchasing power. January imports amounted to approximately $17,000,000, showing an unfavorable balance against the Free State of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. Most of the trade is carried on with Great Britain and with Ulster.

War and separation never stops trade. Great Britain is the principal customer of the Irish Free State and her principal market. In the twelve months ended with March of this year, the Free State sold to Great Britain and Ulster, their hereditary enemies, goods to the value of some $29,000,000. Goods to practically the same value were purchased by the Irish Free State from Great Britain and Ulster in the same period.

From the United States, the Irish Free State purchased goods to the value of nearly $1,500,000 in the twelve months ending with March. Sales to this country were slight, amounting to only about $100,000.

The principal exports of the Free State are livestock, beer, and spirits, textiles, hides and skins. Leading imports from all sources are wheat, flour, automobiles, cotton goods, wearing apparel, hats, shoes, fertilizers, woolen goods and electrical equipment.

Each year the Irish Free State expects to grow stronger economically and increase her trade with the outside world. There is a strong demand for new direct ship lines between the Irish ports and the United States, particularly the Gulf ports, whence naval stores, cottonseed meal and other southern products are wanted.

Irish government-controlled railways are being operated at a deficit, but there is a bill now pending before the Dail Eireann, the Irish parliament, which would consolidate the big lines with some of the smaller and weaker ones. It is believed that by making one big operating company, economies would be effected and better service rendered. A subsidy of some $250,000 annually is proposed in the measure. This would run for 10 years until the companies got on paying basis.

There is general optimism about conditions in the Free State and a hope that the age-old strife will be succeeded by industry and prosperity.

CITY-WEARY

Come, let's get out of here! Out of the din of it, Out of the bickering, out of the shiz of it, Out of the smoke of it, out of the noise of it, Out of the pitiful, lean, leering joys of it. Come on to the top floor.

With the air is washed clean, And the trees are a-glow With the gold of the sun. And there's naught to be done Save to be there and look At life's beauties and dream.

Come, let's get out of here! Out of the stress of it, Out of the pain and the powder and dress of it, Out of the ery of the loss or the gain of it, Out of the hurt and the grief and the pain of it.

Let's slip away To the hills for a day. With the trees is nothing, On counters and shelves, Nothing to strive for, To work or contrive for, Let's leave the city And just be ourselves.

Come, let's get out of here! Out of the crush of it, Out of the heat of it, out of the heat of it, Out of the withering, scrofulous conceit of it. Come on to the top floor.

Where the clean breezes blow, On where the sunbeams Are all that they seem; Let's merely walk a-while, Bander and talk awhile, Giving our souls The full sweep of a dream.

HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 11, 1924.

Astrologers read this as a doubtful day for while Mercury is in his benefit aspect Neptune is adverse.

This should be a lucky day for signing leases and contracts. It is good for settling accounts and computing interest.

Under this way messages of pressing importance to be received from foreign countries and newspapers should profit by increased circulation.

Publicity is under a direction of the stars, making for the greatest demand for all forms of advertising. Publishers will benefit and so will editors.

Farmers should benefit from certain weather conditions and also from improved market prices.

Again the seers repeat their often issued warning that the prices of food will continue to rise.

Neptune is in an aspect denoting religions sentiments and unless the seers are misled there will be many controversies among persons of different faiths.

Creeds will be much discussed at this time when persons whose church is their automobile and whose treasures are laid up in banks instead of in heaven become sensitive about a man's method of saying his prayers.

Mercury is a forerunner of new international complications in which American diplomacy will be tested.

War clouds that are as yet little more than a mist are said to be gathering surely in Europe and Uncle Sam should not fail to keep his weather eye open, astrologers assert.

Mercury gives a foreshadowing of some sort of mistake that a high government official of the United States will make with a most far-reaching result.

Fraud and robbery will increase during the summer when novel cases of expert thievery will be discovered.

Persons whose birthday it is may expect a very active year. They should watch their financial affairs.

Children born on this day probably will be quiet and clever and on the whole very fortunate in all business enterprises. Girls are usually most attractive and the objects of much adoration.

BRONCHORHEA

This is not a new disease. I am going to endeavor to define it. Dr. D. W. Walker, who is generally pretty nice, is recent when he tries to define things like somersaults and colds, tells us that bronchitis is an excessive flow of mucus from the bronchi. When chronic bronchitis is associated with such a condition there is often, not always, some ballooning or dilation of the bronchi, and that is called bronchiectasis. The concentration of large amounts of sputum, especially upon change of posture, is a common occurrence in bronchiectasis. Certain special remedial measures are used in cases of bronchiectasis, such as posture treatment as recently described here, removal to a dry warm climate, and so on. When the patient will not be afraid to take the air every day in the year, certain inhalations of medicated steam or vapor, belly exercise, autogenous (self-furnished) bacteriustherapy (more familiarly called bacterial vaccines). We discussed the climate in another recent talk on bronchitis and concluded the with all due consideration for the climate of Commerce, booster societies and clubs who do not sunbathe in sun-savvy countries, and so on. ## MISTRESS WILDING:

A ROMANCE, BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

Author of "Casanova", "Capital", "Blood", "Fortune's Fool", etc.)
Young Richard Westmacott, by nature kindly and bold, but not by the will of Lord Gervase Scrooby's richly appointed home, has had a cup of wine with the two young Anthony Wildings when that gentleman is about to drink a toast to Ruth Westmacott, the rash young fool's sister. He knew Wilding to be a bold and contemptuous for that reason but had invited Wilding with impunity. But Ruth has scorned Wilding's attentions, and now he means to make his offer to when her brother is again friendly with her. Wilding and Richard are to fight a duel on the morrow. That night Ruth, riding on her sister's horse, rode to Ruth's home, the unsmiling man. Sir Rowland Blame is the suitor Richard favors, for he has drawn a bargain with Blame that when he is made worthy of the sacrifice she will be making for him. Diana with Richard's trouble, Diana persuades Ruth to call on Wilding and ask him to forego this duel in which her brother is so greatly involved. Wilding says he will share Richard's life and honor if she will marry him.

"So now," said Diana, "you know the sacrifice your sister has made to save you, and when you speak of the apology Mr. Wilding tendered you, perhaps you'll speak of it in a tone less fond."

But the sarcasm was no longer needed. Already poor Richard was very pale and his mouth was split as all snuffed out. He observed at last how pale and set was his sister's face, and he realized something of the sacrifice she had made. Never in all his life was Richard so near to lapsing from the love of himself, never so near to forgetting his own meanness, his own baseness, of Ruth. Lady Blame said slowly, heart fluttering with dismay and perplexity. Heaven had not equipped her with a spirit capable of dealing with a situation such as this. Blake stood in make-believe stolidly dissembling his infinite chagrin and the stormy emotions within him, for some signs of which Diana watched his countenance in vain.

"You shall not do it!" cried Richard suddenly. He came forward and laid his hand on his sister's shoulder. His voice was almost gentle. "Ruth, you shall not do this."

"It is the help for it,"

"I should know what the help for it is, and for it is just a moment—he contemplated danger and even death with grimminess.

"I can take up this quarrel again," he announced. "I can compel Mr. Wilding to meet me."

Ruth's eyes, looking up at him before she could reply, "You are right, Richard. Mistress Westmacott must not be the scapegoat. She shall not play the part of indulgence."

Ruth smiled wistfully as she answered him with a question.

"What is the help for it?"

"I should know what the help for it is, and for it is just a moment—he contemplated danger and even death with grimminess.

"I can take up this quarrel again," he announced. "I can compel Mr. Wilding to meet me."

Richard, who had been silent, but not by the will of Lord Gervase Scrooby's richly appointed home, has had a cup of wine with the two young Anthony Wildings when that gentleman is about to drink a toast to Ruth Westmacott, the rash young fool's sister. He knew Wilding to be a bold and contemptuous for that reason but had invited Wilding with impunity. But Ruth has scorned Wilding's attentions, and now he means to make his offer to when her brother is again friendly with her. Wilding and Richard are to fight a duel on the morrow. That night Ruth, riding on her sister's horse, rode to Ruth's home, the unsmiling man. Sir Rowland Blame is the suitor Richard favors, for he has drawn a bargain with Blame that when he is made worthy of the sacrifice she will be making for him. Diana with Richard's trouble, Diana persuades Ruth to call on Wilding and ask him to forego this duel in which her brother is so greatly involved. Wilding says he will share Richard's life and honor if she will marry him.

"So now," said Diana, "you know the sacrifice your sister has made to save you, and when you speak of the apology Mr. Wilding tendered you, perhaps you'll speak of it in a tone less fond."

But the sarcasm was no longer needed. Already poor Richard was very pale and his mouth was split as all snuffed out. He observed at last how pale and set was his sister's face, and he realized something of the sacrifice she had made. Never in all his life was Richard so near to lapsing from the love of himself, never so near to forgetting his own meanness, his own baseness, of Ruth. Lady Blame said slowly, heart fluttering with dismay and perplexity. Heaven had not equipped her with a spirit capable of dealing with a situation such as this. Blake stood in make-believe stolidly dissembling his infinite chagrin and the stormy emotions within him, for some signs of which Diana watched his countenance in vain.

"You shall not do it!" cried Richard suddenly. He came forward and laid his hand on his sister's shoulder. His voice was almost gentle. "Ruth, you shall not do this."

"It is the help for it,"

"I should know what the help for it is, and for it is just a moment—he contemplated danger and even death with grimminess.

"I can take up this quarrel again," he announced. "I can compel Mr. Wilding to meet me."

Ruth's eyes, looking up at him before she could reply, "You are right, Richard. Mistress Westmacott must not be the scapegoat. She shall not play the part of indulgence."

Ruth smiled wistfully as she answered him with a question.

"What is the help for it?"

JUNIOR HIGH GIRLS IN PRETTY PAGEANT

"Dearest Wish" Presented to 300 Indoors Due to Unfavorable Weather.

In graceful song and dance numbers the junior high school dancing classes presented a beautiful pageant, "The Dearest Wish," before 300 Monday afternoon in the high school auditorium, the place for the pageant, the court house park, having been changed because of weather conditions.

Barrett Howland, as the child, fell asleep and was transported into fairland. There she met the fairy queen, Virginia Granger, who seated upon a purple throne, was attended by Cecilia Bremer, Alderon Dersch and Helen Mulligan.

The first wish made by the child was for a castle, this was granted in the presence of Helen Curry, Jean Cudlitz, Dorothy Cudlitz and Nadie Robertson, who appeared in gaily colored costumes representing stick candy and other favorite confectionary.

Ellen June Fathers, the gypsy fortune teller, graced the second wish of the child, the wish to hear songs, and the favorites of Mother Goose had stepped into being; Jean and Jeanette Granger, as pates, held the book as the characters came onto the stage. In the Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary story, the following girls impersonated the instruments of the rhyme: Marjorie Atwell, Elizabeth Baumgartner, Rose Nichols, Ruth Anne Grace Wood, and Lorette Krupke.

Next appeared the Queen of Hearts, Elizabeth Mihopolsky; the Knave, Eva Serasy and the King, Merlin Viall. A droll impersonation of old King Cole was presented by Cecilia Dersch. She was attended by Dorothy Winters, Berneice Samys, Helen Granger and Esther Blankenship, with Olive Pound, Marjorie Stewart and Irene Buchholz as the fillers three. Hazel Kallies as Little Bo-Peep, wore a quaint frock and sang the verse as she stepped out of the book.

Geraldine Tonlinson was Humphrey Dandy, with Gweneth Holt, Katharine Sullivan, Virginia McGowan and Vera Gleason playing the parts of all the King's horses and all the King's men. Goose, Goose Gander, impersonated by Katherine Wyman, was hailed with delight by the children as she descended the stage.

A fourth character completed her part. She became a member of the fairy court, which was a gaily assorted assemblage of the favorites of bookland. The fairy queen, beautifully done by Virginia Granger, granted the third wish of the child, when she called in a host of children to play parts in still more. Singing gnomes, Lolly-Lolly and Merry-go-round were put on by a group composed of pupils of the first and sixth hour classes.

Sixteen girls attired in white danced the May pole, dressed with a green and white pole supported by the pretties, Jean and Jeanette Granger. They were little Robbins, Violet Keller, Lillian Cohen, Jean Parkes, Lulu Ward, Marion Rooney, Hazel Crowe, Blair Baum, Edith Lottes, Ruth Morris, Agnes Stone, Margaret Rosend, Eleanor Tyrolt, Susie Fisher, Edith Cramm and Ellen Fornet.

A shock struck, the fairies vanished and the child was roused from her slumber by her mother, calling, Doris Hamer, as the mother, rained from the Mother Goose bed, the curtain fell. Many of the girls gave an aesthetic cheer, the child was being brought back from fairland.

Miss Dorothy Kropp directed the pageant and Miss Lelah Vilk played the piano accompaniment.

BLAINE-HIGHWAY CLIMAX, JUNE 14

Roll Call Vote on Questions Raised in Letter Will Bring Showdown.

MADISON—The dispute between Governor Blaine and the state highway commission over road policies is expected to come to a climax on June 14, by which date the governor has demanded a roll-call vote on all the questions raised in his recent communication to the commission.

The highway matter will be taken up by the governor immediately upon his return from the gubernatorial convention at Cleveland. It is stated and unless satisfactory steps have been taken by that time, he is expected to recall one or two members of the commission.

In his letter to the highway commission which became known yesterday, the governor criticizes certain members with regard to incompetency and inefficiency and official misconduct in relation to the highway department.

Answer "undecided."

Speaking of the highway commission's answer to his charges, the governor declared it to be "indefinite and unsatisfactory." He indicated that unless specific action is taken by June 14, he expects to take further steps.

"Your reply is indefinite and unsatisfactory," the governor's letter declares. "The several communications above mentioned, forwarded to you, were definite, specific and called for action. Your reply indicates evasion and inaction. That communication is an attempt to misrepresent the executive matters pertaining to the action of the commission and vital to the governor in the administration of the laws under mandate of our constitution."

"I am convinced that the majority of the commission is in that frame of mind to obstruct the proper administration of justice and to damage the administration of the department and the administration by the commission."

"When the record is made up, then will be able to know upon whom individual responsibility rests, whereupon the executive actions will be one for the executive to determine, upon the record so made."

The governor could remove the three appointive members of the commission for cause if they decline to submit their resignations on his request.

LOCAL BANDS RANK CLOSE TO WINNERS

Boys' Band Only 4.89 Points Behind Green Bay, Class "B" Champ.

Though winning fifth place and thereby appearing to be well down on the list, when scores of the various organizations are considered, the difference between the local boys' band and that of the winning band, Green Bay, at the Lake Geneva state contest is only 4.89 points.

The class "B" contest, in the class of the three, by far, with only fractions of points difference between the competing organizations. The difference is attributable to better tone and nothing else.

Each of the Janesville bands, the boys' and the girls', by taking fifth place in their respective classes, have awarded $10 worth of music.

The local boys were defeated by Virginia for fourth place by only forty-five hundredths of a point, and the scoring was as close for the other places. Differences for the first three places are .45-.44-.38; a total of 1.63 points between the highest and lowest.

While the local band was defeated by four cities, it in turn was victorious over six others in the same class. Scoring by schools was as follows: Green Bay, 96.41; awarded the first place; Elkhorn, 95.92; a total of individual members and $35.00; Elkhorn, $7.22; bronze medals to individual members, and $5.75; Elkhorn, $6.24; $25; Virginia, 86 points, $29 in music; Janesville boys' band, $2.55, $10 in music; Lancaster, $4.22; $5 in music; Beaver Dam, $2.23; $5 in music; Elkhorn, $1.22; Two Rivers, $7.79; Superior, $4.00; Waterford, $2.40.

Greater differences to be noted in the class "C" competition, in which the girls' band was entered. Four and one-half points is all that intervened between them and fourth place. However, due to the higher place, the competition was not as close, an average of about three and one-half being held between them.

The local girls were awarded $1.5 points, against 99 for the winner of first place, Milwaukee Vocational. Other scores were: Richland Center, 93.75; Elkhorn, 88.75; Manitowoc, 87.75; Chilton, 86.50; Jefferson, 86.50; Two Rivers, 79; Waterford, 77; and Walworth, 68.65.

MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL IS POSTPONED

Boys' Band Only 4.89 Points Behind Green Bay, Class "B" Champ.

On account of noncompliance expressed at the high school, other activities, the regular meeting of the city council scheduled to have been held Monday night was postponed by an agreement reached late Monday afternoon and will be held at 7:30 Tuesday night instead.

Three important matters of business are scheduled to come up, the main one being the proposed ordinance to increase the license fees on all forms of business and in addition requiring a annual license fee of $2 on every hotel, grocery store, restaurant, meat market and other place selling food and drink.

The council is also expected to take action on the petition of the Park corps for an appropriation for this year. Councilman Bernard M. Palmer is chairman of the special committee.

Mr. Palmer will report on the advisability of aiding the national guard.

The ordinance establishing an electrical code for Janesville and requiring permits, fees and inspections for all wiring done in the structure, will be given its second reading. This measure is considered as important as the new licensing ordinance and is in some respects more so because it eventually will affect a larger number of people.
